one a second chance? This is India versus Pakistan. The game starts at 08.00 am. This book touches on various aspects of Indian society, from the villagers of rural India to the sub-urban educated middle class. The protagonist has to face the fact that the rich are not all that rich and the poor are not that poor. With the country on a verge of elections, the police launches a series of raids, a day before the main game starts. Toe to toe This book starts with the clichéd scene of a girl and a boy sitting on a river bank, while on the opposite bank the girl is about to get married to the boy. The scene continues for 15 chapters until the girl leaves the boy and never returns. This book follows the journey of a young girl and her mother. She goes through various challenges in life and returns to her roots eventually. The journey starts with her mother taking the girl for medical check-ups in the same hospital where she had been born. The protagonist of this book was once a well-known cricket star of the 1960s, who along with his contemporaries later became the villain of the story, as he used the team he was playing with to fix the matches. A convicted match fixer, who had been blacklisted by all the cricketing countries for a long time, returns to India with a dream to bring back cricket, which was once the pride of the nation. This book is a sequel to the famous bestseller A City of Splendour. The protagonist becomes the coach of the Indian National team. Controversy The book was banned in Pakistan. This book was also banned in India in 2012 and a fine of 2 million INR was imposed on the publisher. The banned book was printed in the second printing, and was then put on the market.
