Dynamical correlation length for 2D QCD with adjoint fermions. We study the long-distance correlations of 2D QCD with $N(f) = 2(+)(nf)$ adjoint Dirac fermions and their relevance for the chiral phase transition at finite temperature. We analyze the spectral functions in the quenched approximation by using a functional renormalization group method. We find that the fermionic dynamics is insensitive to the sign of the coupling κ if $\kappa > 0$, whereas the system behaves differently for κ Relief of pain, dizziness, and nausea by low-dose alprazolam in patients with vertigo of recent onset. Twelve patients, aged 14 to 68 years, with recent onset vertigo were treated with alprazolam in a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled, crossover trial. The patient's subjective rating of the efficacy of alprazolam and placebo was used to define a therapeutic response. Both doses of alprazolam (0.5 and 1 mg) had a statistically significant greater benefit over placebo in reducing the intensity of vertigo and nausea, as well as the incidence and intensity of dizziness. These results suggest that alprazolam is effective in the treatment of vertigo of recent onset and, at low doses, is well tolerated. Medical imaging is critical to the practice of medicine, since medical images can reveal the presence and/or absence of disease. Medical images are generally made by x-raying the inside of the human body, by ultrasound of the inside of the body, by CAT scan (for bone and soft tissue
