V. Krishna ReddyGlobal Overview Shah Rukh Khan forayed into a new avatar with Happy New Year and many new fans were born overnight, but what does that signify to the Hindi cinema as a whole? Is it a new dawn? And does it mean the days of overcrowded and tense multiplexes and Mumbai Dabbas are over? 'Golmaal' is one such film that seems to have been made by the masses for the masses. It is a film that has high entertainment quotient, made for the audience that now boasts a supernova quality but it did not find many takers at the box office. An oft criticized film, it did succeed, and would probably make a lot more money, but that too at the cost of the next film in line which is bound to be much higher budget and bigger audience pull. While we do not know the exact reason why, a lot has been written in the media about the shortcomings of the film. Criticisms ranged from the unorganised audience shunning the film, to the confusing opening scene and the silliness that led to the film getting the tag of a 'comedy-thriller'. The director being someone like Farhan Akhtar, who did 'Jab We Met' and ♦
