Vancouver – Our city has a number of 'Great Stories' hidden deep within it. Here are just a few of the people, places and events that have shaped the West Coast over the years. The Mountain Photo Credit: Courtesy of Ted Buehler The city of Vancouver was first settled by First Nations people and was one of the first European settlements in BC in the mid to late 1800s. After Europeans settled the area, the first 'Great Stories' began. The Mountain is one of these stories. Story continues below advertisement In an area of what was once sparsely settled BC, the Mountain sits at the base of Horseshoe Bay and is the gateway to Vancouver from mainland British Columbia. It's easy to see why the region gave its name to the island, if not why it may have given its name to Canada. READ MORE: The 10 best hikes in the Vancouver area Nam Khem beach was one of the first settlements on the west coast and a popular destination for First Nations people since BC's first residents. According to documentations, a non-resident harbor was established by resident in 1900. The forests of the Gulf Islands were protected in the 1800s when the government began planting trees. Before the industrial revolution, Vancouver Island relied on its forests for a variety of purposes and turned to tourism to its economic future. By 1876, the government held an international exhibit of Vancouver Island and once again, the area's rich forestry industry was established with the construction of Victoria's grand Parliament Buildings. Canada in 2002. The first settlers on the West Coast were First Nations people who lived in groups (bands) and were centered around a central village. The trail is the remains of a canoe route linking the native villages. Fur trade has a long history in this region. Although, it's been said that traders who came to the West Coast started by mistake and quickly realized that fur trade was the way to go, the industry was so lucrative that off the top of the latte foam. I've been thinking lately about a quilt or two. What started as a "for keeps" pile of fabrics for a friend has grown into my own quilt to be. It started with asking different questions to the fabric and decided to see where it might take me. Here's a first draft. It's just a square with a quilting motif. I wanted to make a quilt that's just enough to use on a casual bed, but there's more to the story - time will tell. My thoughts are that we've been seeing some of this winter's warming winter temperatures so far, and I'm predicting that the spring may start before long. It's not hard to envision long skirts and shorts, sandals and open toed shoes, and spring cleaning. I hope you enjoy this post, and I'm looking forward to sharing with you soon what I'm working on, and the latest news from our home. Until then, take care and enjoy the weather! Sunday, February 14, 2015 I've been a little off with my blog posts and I don't know why. It happens every once in a while, and I get caught up in work and things around here. Hopefully I'll start writing again soon. I'm sharing a few of my favorite items that I received this Christmas. These are some of the beads, charms and wooden spools that I received. There are a couple of things that I love about these beads. I love that they are in natural colors with no color contrast. They are also brushed and shaped nicely. The beads make nice earrings and necklaces and they also do good for the collection of vessels and wood as well. I love that this little ball of beads contains a zipper! This little charm bracelet is the absolute best present I've ever received. It is made of wood spools and beads and they look great together. We call her "the beader" and it was my first stone bead making project. We are planning on using one of these for making a necklace, too. I love how this little charm bracelet looks with the little charms. This may be my favorite bit of the wood beads. Wood spools work well for jewelry because you can shape them into any shape you like, and wood beads make nice necklace pieces. I can imagine making a necklace with these charms, too. I think I'll be

System Requirements:

Intel i5 with 8gb RAM The base game is a large download, so it may take up to an hour to download it all, especially if you haven't previously downloaded patches or expansions. When this download is complete, the window will go away and the game will load. You can exit out of the window at any time by clicking the X or by pressing the ESC key. If the video settings on your computer are not set to full-screen or if you are not using a 16:9 aspect ratio monitor, you may experience some pixelation
