Technology has changed dramatically in recent years, but Photoshop still uses many of the same tools used to modify images from the past. You can explore the different fields on a person's face in Photoshop and transform an average snapshot into a stunning portrait. In this blog, learn to shape a person's face using different tools in Photoshop and illustrate some of its major features.

Step 1: Create a New, Blank File Before you start, make sure that you have Photoshop updated to the most recent version to take advantage of these features. Open a blank image and name it paulbaker.psd for now.

Step 2: Create a New, Blank Layer When you open the Image menu and choose New (Layer), you'll notice the option to Create New Blank Layer. Make sure this is on before you proceed with any of these instructions.

Step 3: Select and Organize Your Layers With the New Layer dialog box open, make sure that Make Unique is selected. Choose the Select tool from the Toolbox and then click a place on your image to begin selecting. Once you are done, press the Enter key on your keyboard and the selected area should turn green. Next, press Ctrl + Shift + E (Command + Option + E on the Mac) to hide all the other layers from view so you only see the layer you just created.

Step 4: Select and Mask Your Face Layer With the layer selected, click the Brush tool with the Rectangular Shape in the Toolbox and then set your Brush Size to 190. You'll notice a green box appear over your image, which means that the Rectangle tool will take the shape of the area you're painting. Click and drag across the face, and Photoshop will create the darks and lights of the face. To change the size, hold the Control (Ctrl) key and hit '=' (equal sign). Your face is now selected and the dark and light areas will be masked. Mask layers are set to protect unwanted areas, and white indicates what will be hidden or obscured in an image. The mask is the key to most of Photoshop's layer mask features. You can use the Layer Mask tool, located in the Tools section, to remove the mask on a layer that has one, or you can just right-click on a layer mask to make it visible again. Right-click the new layer mask and choose Delete Layer Mask to remove it.

Step 5: Create a

Photoshop and Photoshop Elements are very similar in their function and features. Elements can even import the work files from a PSD document created in Photoshop and it is the ideal tool to create new PSD designs and open/edit other PSD files. Therefore, the main purpose of this article is to show you how to open and work on a PSD file in Adobe Photoshop Elements.

Steps In this tutorial, you will learn how to open and edit a PSD file in Photoshop Elements and how to work on it. Read this tutorial in this order: Open Photoshop Elements and create a new image by importing an existing one. It allows you to have a different size of the opened file. Insert and edit the elements within the PSD. Resize an element so that it fits on the canvas.

How to open a PSD file in Photoshop Elements Open Photoshop Elements. Create a new image. Open the file you want to work on by clicking the File/Open button and selecting the PSD file.

Step 1: Create a new image Import the file you want to work on by clicking the Open button and selecting the PSD file. You can also use the Open with option. If you open the file using the Open With option, you will have the choice to open the file as a separate document and then open the image from that file. It is the best way to open a PSD file. Creating a new image will load the file into the composition. The canvas will be where you work on the image. You can change the size of the canvas by dragging the size handle or by using the Zoom option.

Step 2: Insert and edit elements within the PSD file Once the image is loaded into the composition, click the rectangle

Image caption Cars were forced to stop in the middle of the road in St Asaph Police forces in North Wales are highlighting a "major incident" after part of the A55 at St Asaph, Denbighshire, was blocked for several hours. Motorists faced traffic chaos with vehicles being forced to stop in the middle of the road at around 10:20 BST. The road remains closed, with motorists advised to take the A55 or A55(M) in both directions and use the existing A548. Police in the area have said it will be closed for several hours. Officers from Wrexham and Flintshire said it was due to a road improvement scheme on the A55 between the junction with the A548 and the A5. The diversion was in place until 13:30 BST but police said it would reopen at 15:00. The network of streets is busy with residents and commuters linking the A55 to the North Wales Expressway at St Asaph and to the north coast.

BEIJING — The Chinese-owned casino company that operates two of Las Vegas's newest gambling establishments is bankrolling a series of ads for President Donald Trump that are likely to anger U.S. casino owners, a sizable chunk of whom already view Trump's views as detrimental to their businesses. MGM Resorts International is spending as much as $7.5 million on an advertising campaign in Nevada, where it owns the Mandalay Bay and Encore resorts, according to agreements disclosed on the company's website, and it is selling the ads on behalf of two pro-Trump Super PACs — America First Action and Great America PAC. In an unusual twist, the casinos are funding the campaign, which includes television, radio and digital ads on social media, according to the disclosures. U.S. casinos are normally barred from involvement in U.S. presidential campaigns. The company is not directly backing Trump's campaign, but is co-ordinating with the two Super PACs, which were formed a few weeks ago. The ads are in line with Trump's policies and rhetoric and are likely to reflect the views of Steve Wynn, the Las Vegas casino magnate and Republican fundraiser who is chairman and chief executive of MGM Resorts. Wynn has discussed Trump during a U.S. Senate committee hearing last week, when he praised the candidate's property tax proposal as one that
