

“It’s a total immersion game - putting you in the game and driving it to a conclusion,” said Tan. “I couldn’t be more thrilled to work with EA Sports on FIFA, in hopes of bringing the game to life even more.” More on this story at engadget.com. Myeloma is a malignant disorder characterized by the proliferation of clonal plasma cells that produce and secrete monoclonal immunoglobulins. The accumulation of these abnormal immunoglobulins in the bloodstream and the formation of bone lesions are major factors contributing to the morbidity and mortality of the disease. On the other hand, the plasma cell infiltration of the bone marrow of patients has also been associated with a poor prognosis. This study aimed to evaluate the role of some genes that may be involved in the pathogenesis of myeloma by studying their expression in myeloma cells and in bone biopsies from patients with myeloma. The patients studied were consecutively recruited in the Division of Hematology of the Institute of Clinical Hematology of the University of São Paulo, Brazil. The research team investigated the expression of VEGF, TGF- β^* , GM-CSF, TNF- α^* and CD70 in the peripheral blood and bone marrow samples of 15 patients with myeloma and in 10 healthy individuals. In addition, 19 bone samples from myeloma patients were histologically and morphologically examined for the presence of plasma cell infiltration and for the formation of bone lesions. The study identified high levels of TGF- β^* and TNF- α^* in myeloma cells and in the bone biopsies of patients with myeloma. It was also shown that the expression of these genes was associated with the stage of the disease. The expression of the analysed markers tended to be higher in patients with bone disease than in those without bone involvement, but the difference was not statistically significant. It was observed that the levels of VEGF were significantly higher in bone biopsies than in peripheral blood in patients with myeloma. VEGF and CD70 were also expressed at higher levels in bone biopsies than in peripheral blood in healthy individuals. The current study suggests that VEGF and TGF- β^* could contribute to the pathogenesis of myeloma, and that both molecules may be associated with bone
