Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 Version 17 Crack Full Version

1. 1. If your image is not in Photoshop format, you need to convert it to that format before using the features in Photoshop. To start, use this technique: Open the image in Photoshop and select Image | Adjustments | Color Corrections | Convert to sRGB. If you do not have an image in Photoshop format, you need to use Photoshop's own _layer_ (pixel) format. This also makes it easier to work with your image because you can work on the layer (a pixel layer) that your image is on, and no other layer is included. You can create your own pixel layer by clicking Layer | New | Pixel. In the New Layer dialog box that appears, you can type a name for the new layer. If your image is a GIF file, your layer should be named "New Layer 1.gif." 2. 2. After you convert your image to a pixel layer, make sure that the Resample Image check box is selected. This step resizes your image to the size of a single pixel. If your image is larger than a pixel, it might be worth converting your image to JPEG, TIFF, or another format that you can convert back to a pixel layer later. 3. 3. Choose Layer | Layer Mask | Layer Mask. In the New Layer Mask dialog box, select the color box next to Colorize. Click OK. 4. 4. Paint or draw in the mask. You can use any color you like. 5. 5. Click OK in the Layer Mask dialog box. You now have a mask—a painting of your image—that will shape the image to the mask. 6. 6. Open the Layer Mask dialog box again. In the Transparency box, enter 50% and click OK. Your image has been masked by the 50% mask, and you can paint directly over the mask and see the pixels of the original image still in place. 7. 7. Choose File | Save As and save your new layer under a new file name.

If you open a saved image directly from a camera or scanner, the image will already be in the correct format. Select an image. Open the Properties window. If the image is in a file format you don't have, in the top of the Properties window, click Import, then From File. You'll see a list of formats that Photoshop Elements can import, and you can select an option from this list. For example, you can choose to import a GIF, JPEG or TIFF file. You can also import an image directly from your camera or scanner. When you import a file that has no Image Size setting, Photoshop Elements assumes that it should be your default size. For example, if your camera shoots in Large format, but you are importing an image as a small size, Photoshop Elements will create the image at its default large size. If you open an image in Elements, it will be of the same format as the original source. If you download an image from the internet and save it, the original format is maintained. Click OK.
